How can I support my son/daughter?

Lesson Time

Fulling engaging and working hard in lessons is one of the most important things a student can do to succeed. So, encouraging your child/children to concentrate and work hard in lessons is the first step for success. The Religious Studies exam works out to a minute per mark; therefore, students should put in maximum effort during practice exam questions. This will make sure they are able to complete the exam in the time given.

Home Learning

Year 10 will have home learning EVERY WEEK.

All students have an academic planner and are expected to write down their home learning properly.

For each piece of home learning, they are expected to write down:

- a) What they have to do
- b) When is the deadline
- c) When are they going to do it
- d) Where are they going to do it

How can your child be successful in RE?

- You can check that your son/daughter is being organised and recording their home learning each week.
 - Test your child – regularly and in time test conditions
 - Encourage your child to complete weekly past papers
- Help your child to create their own revision cards/resources regularly
- Help them learn their key word definitions word for word and keep testing them

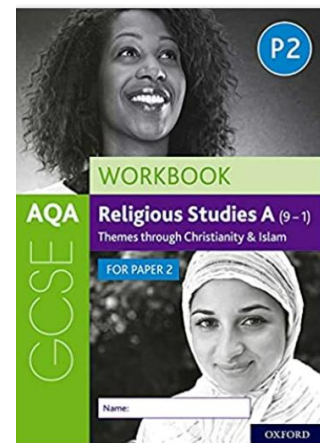

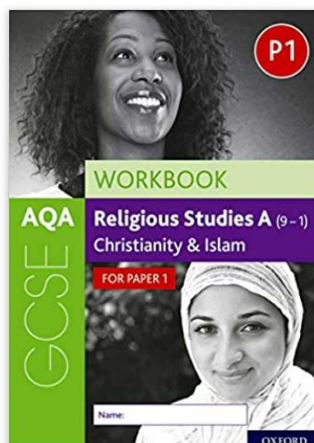

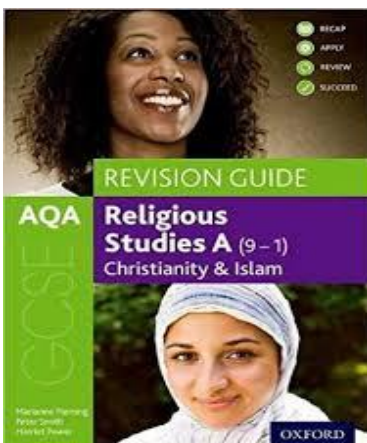

Religious Studies home learning will typically be one of the following tasks:

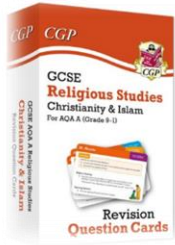

- 1) To complete a practice exam questions
- 2) Activities from their revision workbooks
- 3) Quotation learning
- 4) Seneca work

Students who regularly complete their Religious Studies home learning to a high standard are far more likely to succeed than those who do not.
